

Mercury's orbit diverges by just one-millionth from predictions made with Newton's laws, prompting some astronomers to once suggest an unseen planet, "Vulcan," lurked near the Sun. Einstein's relativity showed that warped space-time surrounding our star accounts for the problem.

